He was an intimate friend and admirer of the celebrated PETRARCH, with whom he became acquainted in his retirement at Vacluse, near Avignon; Petrarch, in return, loved and respected him. All contemporary authors speak of him as a person of distinguished merit.*

See a farther account of his life in a long note prefixed to this MS. by the late Dr. Monto.

5 HOLY BIBLE, in Latin, a very ancient MS. containing above 60 portraits, richly illuminated, the margin and initials the same, with several hundred emblematical figures of birds, beasts, &c. exact representations from life, done with equal elegance, on fine vellum, beautifully executed, imperfect, folio

* The imperfections are, viz. from chap. i. to viii. inclusive, in GENESIS, and 36 leaves in sundry parts cut and torn out; the Bible consists of 742 pages, and the Testament 174; which, by many learned persons, has been deemed a great CURIOSITY.

Charles II. Gill, Bishop of Canterbury, Lord Clarendon, Lord Southampton, Duke of Ormond, Earl of Warwick, with many more of the Nobility of that day, (apparently a book of King Charles II.) a great curiosity.
